UNEMPLOYED BEGIN PILGRIMAGE

CARAVANS MOVE FOR CAPITAL TO DEMAND RELIEF FROM STATE

Police Prepare For May Day Disorders In Many Cities

CLEVELAND, May 1.—While Communists all over the state celebrate May Day, two caravans of unemployed workers and destitute farmers today were to set out from Cleveland and Youngstown on a pilgrimage to Columbus to demand unemployment insurance and other relief from the state legislature.

Seventy-five delegates and a number of others were to begin the "hunger march" from Cleveland. Simultaneously, delegations from the Ohio River valley district were to set out from Youngstown.

The two original caravans are to merge Sunday at Massillon and continue together toward the state capital. The same day, two other delegations, one from Toledo and one from Bridgeport, are to begin their march. Monday the last group is scheduled to begin its hike across the state from Cincinnati.

All of the groups are marching under the auspices of the Ohio Council for Unemployed. They plan to converge in Columbus on May 10 and then meet in the capitol building the next day when the state legislature special session opens to demand unemployment insurance and relief for the farmer.

Practically every large city in the state is scheduled to see one of the caravans enroute. Wooster, Ashland, Mansfield, Gallon, Marion and Delaware are stops for the Cleveland group. The Toledo marchers are to stop overnight in Bowling Green, Findlay, Carey, Upper Sandusky and Marion.

Cincinnati marchers are to stop at Hamilton, Middletown, Dayton, Springfield and London. Fairview, Cambridge, Zanesville, Brownsville, Hebron and Reynoldsburg are on the St. Clairsville route.

Each of the caravans expects to add to its numbers at the stop-over points.

City governments at the scheduled stop-over points have been asked to provide food and shelter for the "hunger marchers." Many have promised to do so. Canteen

HUSBAND WILL BURY FICKLE WIFE; BODY OF MAN UNCLAIMED

Unable To Trace Relatives Of Mixer Of Death Potion

CHICAGO, May 1.—The body of J. H. Hartung, garment salesman of Columbus, O., who Wednesday night ended his life and that of his clandestine sweetheart, Mrs. Kathryn Garrison of Kalamazoo, Mich., by serving them with a death cocktail of poisoned liquor, lay still unclaimed today at a mortuary.

Meanwhile, Ralph Garrison, husband of Hartung's victim, made preparations to bury his wife in Chicago where she lived before they were married eighteen years ago.

A verdict of murder and suicide was returned by the coroner's jury yesterday after the husband had testified to the serving of the fatal drink.

Garrison, who is a magazine circulator in Kalamazoo, told the jurors he was present when the drink was served. He said it followed the announcement of his wife to Hartung in their rooms at a hotel here that she was going to leave him and return to her husband.

A telegram sent by the coroner's office to Hartung's employers in Columbus seeking relatives announced that Hartung had given his address as 508 Ovington Ave., Brooklyn. Brooklyn police notified of the suicide reported back that no one by that name resided there.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY ENDS ODD TRIANGLE

LEGISLATIVE CURB OF TRUSTS, CHAINS PLANNED BY SOLONS

Bills To Strengthen Trade Commission Are Proposed

WASHINGTON, May 1.—A legislative effort to curb the growth of trusts, monopolies and chain store systems, with their inevitable concentration of wealth in the hands of a comparatively few people, will be undertaken in the next congress, it was learned today.

The progressive group, backed by unexpected conservative support, will seek to strengthen the powers of the federal trade commission. Two bills, designed to give the government a "big stick" in regulating corporations, will be sponsored by Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, and will have the active backing of the progressive bloc.

The tremendous development of chain stores, the growth of monopolies and the astonishing increase in the number of billionaires has alarmed not only the progressives but many conservative leaders. Even Senator Fess (R) of Ohio, Republican national chairman, declared the government would have to check the amazing concentration of wealth.

In a speech before the Maryland Retail Grocers Association at Baltimore, Nye charged monopolies and trusts had placed control of America's economic destiny in the hands of a few. He declared congress should arm the government with a "big stick" to control corporations, prevent the destruction of individual enterprises and force a more equitable distribution of wealth.

"Powerful combinations, controlling the production and distribution of the necessities of life exercise no influence in behalf of the substantial interests of a community or the country. Greed has never served a country well, and greed is the first and last motive of the trust."

"Monopoly reaches out and destroys the opportunity of the individual without regard to the lives, comfort and happiness of the people. Over night, they bring about economic changes which make slaves of men who would be free, while further centering control."

DEFENSE OF HOOVER POLICIES WILL BE LAUNCHED BY CABINET

WASHINGTON, May 1.—A sweeping defense of Hoover policies, all down the line, will be launched tomorrow on a national scale, with members of President Hoover's cabinet bearing the brunt of the undertaking.

Criticized by the Democrats, plagued by frequent thrusts from the Republican progressives, the administration "best minds" have decided upon a general offensive to convince the country that hard as the times are they would have been still more difficult but for the policies inaugurated and carried out under Mr. Hoover's direction.

Under the ten members of the cabinet will go on the air in the next few weeks to present various phases of administration activity. Their addresses will be broadcast on a national hookup of radio stations over the Columbia chain, with Secretary of the Interior Wilbur leading off tomorrow night.

Wilbur will be followed successively by Attorney General Mitchell, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of War Hurley, Postmaster General Brown, Secretary of the Navy Adams, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, Secretary of Commerce Lamont, and Secretary of Labor Doak. Only Secretary of State Stimson is missing from the list, and it is probable he will be drawn into the program before it is concluded.

CHILD RECOVERING IN HOSPITAL FROM HURTS RECEIVED FROM LION

Cincinnati Girl Is Clawed By Animal At School

CINCINNATI, O., May 1.—Six-year-old Vivian Leischner, clawed and mauled by a trained lioness which leaped upon her at Whittier School yesterday, was recovering in Good Samaritan Hospital today from severe scalp wounds which the beast inflicted.

Examination of the animal, a cub used for exhibition purposes, was planned by department of health officials and William Harwood, its owner, in an attempt to determine whether wounds which resulted in the attack upon the child might cause infections.

Harwood, owner of a private zoo near Leland Stanford University, was to be questioned some time today by Superintendent of Schools E. D. Roberts for his version of the attack which threw the entire school into a panic and caused injuries to the girl which necessitated a score of stitches in her head.

Physicians had not determined whether the child's skull is fractured, they said.

Denying reports that Harwood purposely fled from the building soon after the cub broke loose from a leash and lunged at the girl, Superintendent Roberts declared that the animal's owner "gave police all the assistance he could."

Harwood, he said, witnessed the attack and freed the girl from the lioness' clasp.

"He had a lecture engagement in the country in the afternoon, and attempted to obtain a release from it, but the school insisted that he appear," the superintendent said. "He filled that engagement and returned to Cincinnati last night to cooperate with police in any way he could."

The lecture engagement, the superintendent said, explained why a policeman who rushed the girl to the hospital reported that Harwood disappeared after the attack.

Harwood, former animal trainer at Dayton Forest Park Zoo, brought recommendations from school superintendents from several cities commending his lecture and exhibit, school officials said.

HIJACKING IS SEEN IN DEATH

NEWPORT, Ky., May 1.—Hijacking warfare was blamed by police here today for the assassination of Ray Baldwin, 26, last night as he sat at the wheel of his automobile in which was stored twenty-two gallons of alleged moonshine whiskey.

Vicious gunfire preceded the slaying of Baldwin, according to witnesses. The shooting began, it was said, when two automobiles, each containing one man, drew alongside of Baldwin's parked car. A man alighted from one of the machines and as he approached, Baldwin, suddenly and without warning, whipped out a revolver and fired twice. Both shots went wild.

The approaching man drew his revolver and returned the fire with three shots from his weapon. One of the bullets struck Baldwin in the right temple, killing him instantly.

The slayer returned to his automobile and fled.

PRINCE MICHAEL IS REPORTED BETTER

BUCHAREST, May 1.—Public attention swerved from King Carol and his parliamentary difficulties today to the illness of his 9-year old son, Crown Prince Michael, who is suffering from diphtheria.

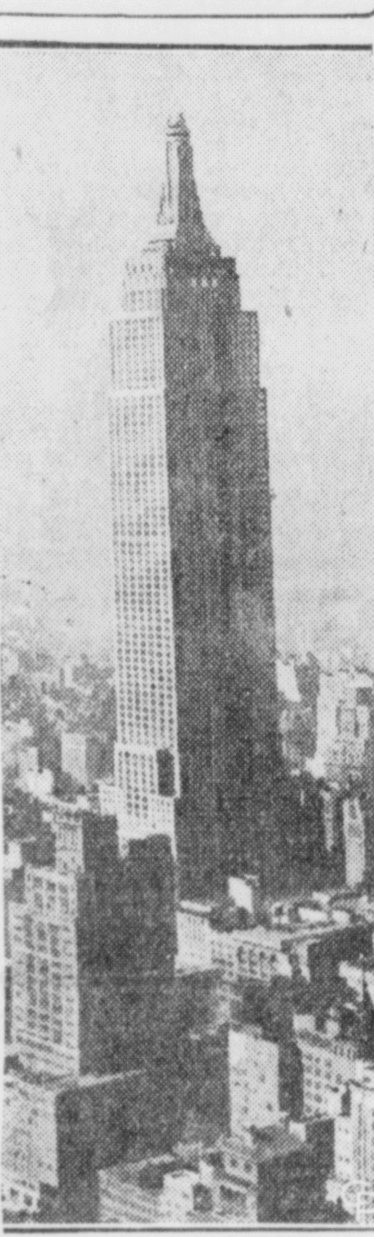

While physicians attending the young prince said the crisis was past and he was no longer in danger, considerable anxiety continued to be felt by the populace. Michael only recently recovered from a severe attack of grip, and his health has never been of the best.

King Carol's troubles, which necessitated the dissolution of the Roumanian parliament and resulted in charges he was contemplating a military dictatorship, faded into insignificance as Princess Helene, mother of Michael, defied the warnings of physicians and remained by her son's bedside.

Prince Michael was said to be running a high temperature in spite of the fact that most of the infection had cleared up.

KING PAYS PENALTY FOR CONVICTION IN MURDER OF FAMILY

Denied Clemency By Governor; Silent Before Death

COLUMBUS, O., May 1.—Denied executive clemency at the end of an unsuccessful attempt by boyhood friends and neighbors to win him a 60-day reprieve, Charles King, 39, Hamilton barber, today had been electrocuted at Ohio Penitentiary for the asphyxiation two years ago of his wife and four children.

King went to his death with a prayer on his lips. He maintained to the end his claim that he was innocent of the death of a son, for which he was convicted, and that he was equally guiltless in the deaths of his wife and three other children.

King walked from the "death house" to the death chair at 8:07 p. m., at the side of two Catholic priests with whom he had spent his last hours. Exactly six minutes later he was dead.

His lips moved swiftly in silent prayer but he did not utter an audible sound from the time he entered the death chamber until he died.

Two guards paused several seconds before adjusting the black mask over his face, as though to give him an opportunity to say something to the little crowd gathered around the chair, but he closed his eyes, and remained silent.

King died without seeing Charles King, Jr., eight-year-old son and the only other member of the family that escaped death in the asphyxiation. The child was not brought to the prison, though King had repeatedly asked to be allowed to see him.

Mrs. Ross King, of Lima, his 74-year-old mother, sat outside the governor's office yesterday when a final plea was made by Coldwater, O., friends who declared that King's wife had frequently threatened to commit suicide and "take the children" with her. Governor White, however, ruled that he believed it unwise to intervene in view of verdicts which had been returned by the courts.

The next scheduled stop is Rio De Oro, on the western coast of Africa, from where Commander Friedrich Christensen hopes to take the big ship across the Atlantic Ocean to South America.

BOILER BLAST IN BRAZILIAN CITY KILLS 45

Fires Explosives And Destroys Naval Laboratory

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 1.—A boiler explosion, detonating more than half a ton of high explosives, was believed to have caused the terrific blast that wrecked the Brazilian naval laboratory at Niteroy yesterday, killing forty-five persons and injuring seventy.

The navy department printed an official casualty list placing the dead at less than the unofficial figure. The report added that eleven structures adjoining the laboratory were destroyed by the explosion.

Government relief squads searched the ruins all night for further casualties, with some sources predicting that all of the 400 employees in the plant at the time of the explosion were either killed or injured.

Although the fire hampered rescue workers, they succeeded in extracting many dead and dying from the wreckage, filling the Niteroy hospital with victims.

So tremendous was the force of the blast that debris from the plant and parts of human bodies were blown more than a quarter of a mile from the plant. The laboratory was situated close to the beach, opposite the city of Rio De Janeiro and many bathers were hurled from the beach into the surf by the detonation.

Two men paddling a canoe a short distance offshore were flung twenty feet into the air. The whole town of Niteroy was rocked as if by an earthquake.

A commission appointed to investigate the tragedy was of the opinion that the explosion of a steam boiler in the engine room of the plant, adjoining the laboratory, detonated explosives stored in the torpedo room of the laboratory.

Fire followed the blast, entirely wrecking the three-story structure. A score of ambulances were rushed to the scene as firemen fought to keep the blaze from spreading to residential sections.

Property damage was estimated at well over half a million dollars. Troops were posted around the plant to prevent disorder.

TWO PERISH IN BLAZE IN AUTO

YORK, Pa., May 1.—Two men were burned to death today and two other men were injured, one perhaps fatally, when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a dairy truck at Thomsville, near here, overturned and burst into flames.

Joseph Feily, 18, and Wilbur Hall, 20, both of New Oxford, Pa., were pinned in the blazing wreck and perished in the flames. Leon Smith and John Weaver, other occupants of the machine, were rushed to York Hospital where attaches said Smith's chances of recovery were slight.

COMPANION CAUGHT WHILE STARTING TO LEAP FROM WINDOW

Sounds Of Attack In Night Revel Limas Hospital Plot

LIMA, O., May 1.—Following their victim into a lavatory, two inmates of the Lima State Hospital for the Insane early today strangled to death Louis Kiehl, 48, a guard, with their bare hands, robbed him of his keys and fled.

One of the inmates, said to be Samuel Nelson, 19, a Negro, committed to the asylum from Cleveland, made good his escape.

The other, reported by attaches at the institution to be John Powell, 24, committed to the hospital from Columbus, was captured as he started to leap to freedom from a window in the amusement hall of the institution.

Powell was immediately placed under heavy guard while police, county authorities and detectives joined in a scouring search of the countryside for Nelson.

Dr. W. H. Vorbau, superintendent of the institution, said that neither Nelson nor Powell had been regarded as dangerous inmates. He said they were confined in the "good conduct" ward of the asylum.

Nelson was attired in the regulation uniform of the insane hospital when he succeeded in making good his flight from the institution. His capture was expected momentarily.

Discovery of the strangled body of the 48-year-old guard was made by other guards in the institution when they heard sounds of a scuffle in the lavatory. Kiehl had apparently been choked to death by the bare hands of the two inmates, it was said.

The alarm was spread throughout the insane hospital following the finding of the guards body and a search was started for the perpetrators of the crime.

Powell was caught just as he was stepping through the window of the amusement hall of the hospital, located on the same floor as the lavatory where Kiehl was murdered. Nelson had preceded Powell through the window and escaped into the darkness of the early morning hours.

Attaches at the Lima Hospital said Kiehl was murdered about 2 a. m. His slayers had followed him to the lavatory to commit their deadly deed. Officials said the crime had undoubtedly been premeditated.

After looting keys from the pockets of the dead guard, the two inmates made their way to the amusement hall where they planned to escape into the night.

Powell was committed to the institution here on October 15, 1930. Nelson was confined here on March 18, this year.

HONOLULU, May 1.—Dorothy Mackall, English film actress, today declined to throw any additional light on her marriage plans, if any, when asked to verify a report that she was engaged to marry John McCormick, former husband of Colleen Moore, film star.

Miss Mackall and McCormick are seen often in each other's company. Miss Mackall and Neil Alpan, Miss Mackall's son of a Los Angeles business man, recently secured a special marriage license here. The wedding was postponed at the last minute by the actress, who was non-committal when pressed for reasons.

LOVE, PREFERRED

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Dad's Girl", "Joretta", Etc.

Copyright 1931, Central Press Association

READ THIS FIRST:

Mary Vaughn is private secretary to Ronald K. Foster, an investment banker of Wall Street. She supports her mother, twin brothers and younger sister, Bonnie, to whom she has always given the best of everything until Bonnie wants the man she loves, debonair Dick Baldwin. Bonnie is the spoiled beauty of the family and makes it known that she does not intend to slave for a living all her days. Mary and Dick have had an understanding that as soon as Dick reaches a certain goal in business they will make more definite plans. Martin Frazier is Foster's wealthiest client, who persists in trying to pay attention to Mary until her employer asks her to be nice to him on business principles, so she humors him by going out with him occasionally. Frazier discovers that his attraction for Mary is quite different from that of his first analysis. He decides to go south for a month and think things out, for which Mary is glad, as she does not like to go about with him. Bonnie lets Dick know about Mary's attentions from Frazier and gradually gains favor with Dick with her insidious reports about Mary. She attends a studio party in Greenwich Village with Mary and Dick, at the home of Willa and Ramon Duchon, and tries to vamp all the men of the party. During the events of the evening, Dick accidentally reveals that he has been carrying a note of Bonnie's in his pocket for a month.

Mary fails to find the way back to the old camaraderie with Dick. When she goes to the office next morning, she finds a huge box of flowers from Frazier and a note saying that he has left an order for flowers for her twice a week. Bonnie goes to New York to look for a position, "accidentally" meets Dick and has lunch with him. Mary opens her second box of flowers from Frazier just as Dick stops in to see her, misunderstands the situation and, augmented by Bonnie's information, he angrily tells Mary that he cannot compete with Frazier and leaves her. The world is shattered for Mary, and her silent grief is terrible, but she lets no one know about it. She still hopes that Dick might come back to her, until she learns that Bonnie is going about with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Twice each week there were great jars of fresh flowers in Mary's office. They became a familiar fixture. He never knew that Mary used them for an object of discipline to her rebellious soul. They became an emblem to her. At first, she had thought to return them, destroy them or send them to some hospital. Then, it occurred to her that they might serve a purpose.

For awhile, every time she looked at Frazier's flowers, scorn and rebellion gripped her. Later the silent magic balm of their message soothed her. She almost began to hate Dick. The flowers became significant of what she had been spared later by having the real man she loved, revealed to her before it was too late.

She began to arrange the flowers and care for them with a faithful interest. She saw that they had fresh water twice each day so that often one bouquet was yet fresh when another arrived, and she would have two bouquets in the room.

Not that she suffered less. The days were a constant torment and the nights no less than torture periods. She never stayed in the city for the evenings except when she worked late.

Her mother understood and sympathized, but had no philosophy to offer in so strange a problem.

"He's not worth your grief, Mary. I can see it's hurting you. Still, what can I say to Bonnie? I don't know as I want either of you to risk your happiness with Dick, if he can be that changeable. I never would have thought it of him, that's a fact."

"Just because I love him is no reason he should love me, I suppose," Mary defended him bravely.

"No. Still, it should be, naturally."

"I don't think so. I believe there are more people loving the wrong way than the right. They are matched up right," thoughtfully.

"Oh, pshaw! Just because there's a scandalous lot of divorces going on all the time—"

"No," Mary explained sagely, "I don't think most of the people who get divorces love anyone but themselves. The motive is usually selfishness or greed or unrestrained passion. I think that most of the people who love the wrong persons, suffer in silence and try to make the best of things. Even when their love is reciprocated, they hesitate and usually refrain from degrading their love with scandal, gossip and the unhappiness of others involved. People who love completely are never selfish—their love for another is protective."

Jennie Vaughn studied her elder daughter, amazed at her clear, calm philosophy. More than anything else, it convinced her of Mary's love for Dick. No person could so analyze love who had never known it. With the maternal instinct, she wished sadly that she might help Mary. But there was nothing she could do. Denying Bonnie to Dick would not give him back to Mary. Neither would she want him that way. Mary would adjust her life and find happiness, somehow. She could depend upon Mary.

But no one knew the struggle that Mary was having to make that adjustment. Life seemed so empty. What was the use? Sometimes, she would stop abruptly at her work, arrested by some thought or memory that haunted her. She would stare bleakly into space for minutes, or the tears would flood her eyes and she would have to escape to the rest room to dash cold water on her face and get herself in hand.

The nights were even worse. Through most of them her thoughts could have echoed: "While you're out having fun I hear the clock striking one, And I'm crying myself to sleep. Wondering who's kissing you I hear the clock striking two And I'm crying myself to sleep. I try to close my eyes and make believe we've never been apart, And in my dreams it seems you're calling me sweetheart; Wondering where you can be I hear the clock striking three, And I'm crying myself to sleep."

Mary had said very little to Bonnie. The younger sister had evaded and avoided Mary at first. But when she discovered that Mary was not going to accuse and denounce her, she affected a neutral cheerfulness during the little time they were together.

After Mary learned that Bonnie had been out with Dick on several occasions, she managed to say, calmly enough, "You and Dick hit it off pretty well, don't you?"

Bonnie looked at her with quick suspicion and bristling with defense. "We get along all right. Always did, didn't we?"

"So I noticed. Don't think I mind, Bonnie. I am glad if you can be happy together. If you took anything away from me, it was something I didn't have," enigmatically.

Bonnie was puzzled. "Well, if you want to know it, he burns me up; and he's crazy about me, too."

"It is nice you agree so well."

"Are you being sarcastic?"

"Not at all. I hope you always agree as well, too, if that is the way you want it. You have my blessing, both of you."

Bonnie related the fact to Dick. He looked queer and uncomfortable. "Oh, Mary's a good sport," he avowed. "Guess I let her down rather mean."

"But she didn't play square with you," Bonnie reminded him, with the alert watchfulness that deceitful people have to practice to keep what they take dishonestly.

"Maybe not. Well, forget it. I hope the man she gets is worthy of her, that's all."

"You still think she's okay," resentfully.

"Sure I do. Why not? Just because she likes someone else better than she does me is no fault of hers. Mary's a great girl."

"But you love me?"

"I'll tell the world, blue-eyed baby."

"You haven't told the world—yet."

"No? Well, when?"

"Any time you say, Dick," she whispered shyly.

It was the second week after Dick had walked out of her office and her life, that Willa Duchon telephoned to Mary one day.

"Where are you keeping yourselves?" she demanded. "We haven't seen nor heard from Dick and you for a decade."

"I've been—busy," Mary evaded. "Hasn't Dick been around?"

"Not a sign of him nor a word from him. What's wrong?" Mary's voice had not deceived her.

"Why, Dick and I—aren't going about together any more, that's all."

"Quite enough!" Willa snorted. "Is that boy absolutely incurable? I thought he had settled down at last. Who is the 'new pansy,' do you know?"

Mary hesitated. "My sister, I guess."

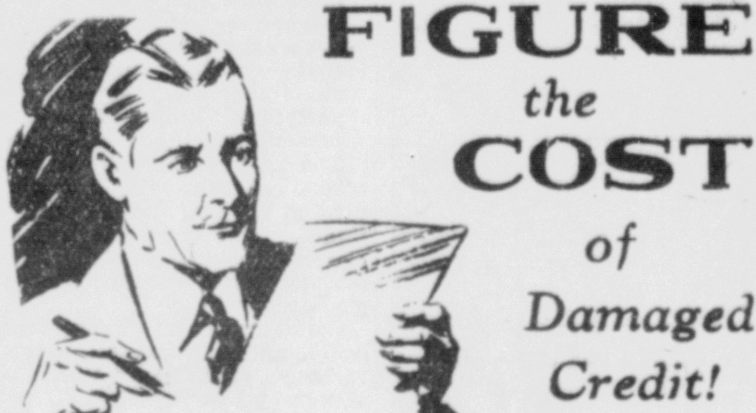

Willa made a whistling sound. "I should have guessed as much. The wind was changing when you were here last. I noticed Dicky weathervane cocking his eye in the other direction. Well—since she's your sister—enough said. Changing the subject, how about running in some evening?"

"It's sweet of you to ask me—but I don't feel—much like going about. I'm not very good society, I fear, these days."

"Well, the poor kid, Willa thought. "Oh, I don't mean a party. We never have parties during the week. Come and have dinner with Ramon and me, and we'll have a talk-fest. Please do!"

"If you are sure you want me," hesitatingly.

CONTINUE MOVE TO RESCUE SCIENTIST

LONDON, May 1.—A double effort was under way today to effect the rescue of Augustine Courtauld, lost British scientist and explorer marooned on a Greenland icecap, messages from Oslo and Copenhagen reported. The Icelandic patrol boat, carrying a land and air rescue expedition, reached the edge of the icefields off Ahmghalsalik and prepared to send a seaplane aloft in search of the lost explorer. At the same time, Captain Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish flier, and two companions, hopped off from Bergen, Norway, enroute to the icefields. The two expeditions will probably combine efforts to locate Courtauld, who is believed near starvation.

RESTRAINING ORDER BLOCKS ELECTION ON ELECTRIC QUESTION

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy granted a temporary restraining order Friday afternoon restraining the Greene County board of elections from holding a special election in June on the Xenia franchise question.

The order was issued the result of a suit filed by The Dayton Power and Light Co., as a property owner and heavy taxpayer in Xenia, on behalf of the city, asking that the election board be enjoined from causing a special election to be held, to restrain payment of costs of such an election from city funds and to enjoin the board from incurring any costs in connection with such an election. Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister, who will represent the election board, said that a date for hearing of the injunction proceedings, at which the Dayton utility will seek to have the temporary injunction made permanent, will probably be assigned Saturday.

City Solicitor W. A. Miller had recently rejected a formal demand made upon him by the Dayton company to bring suit in the name of the city to enjoin the election board from calling the election, this demand being preliminary to the taxpayer's injunction proceedings filed by counsel representing the company, which was awarded the local franchise by City Commission a few weeks ago.

The utility, in support of its petition, also questions the legality of a large number of the signatures which appeared on four petitions, initiative and referendum, circulated on behalf of the Citizens Public Service Co. rival bidder for the electric franchise here.

It is claimed that on the various sections of the petitions affidavits of the circulators appear but that the affidavits fail to show the circulators believe the persons who signed the petitions did so with a knowledge of the contents.

The charge is also made that "hand-writing of a large number of signatures on each petition is different from the hand-writing opposite such names setting forth places of residence of the signers" and that "it appears, on the face of the petitions, to have been written by different persons."

The utility also argues that City

Commission has not provided by ordinance or otherwise for submission to the electors of the initiative petitions and has not fixed a time for holding a special election.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.—Hebrews, x, 35, 36.

MUCH IMAGINATION

There's a story in circulation in Washington which says that banditry is increasing in Nicaragua because President Moncada is not keeping the "guardia," constituting the national army of the country, up to specifications, but is starving it, politicizing it, and generally reducing its efficiency; and at the same time is trying to build up a partisan force on the side. The account also charges the Nicaraguan president with feathering his nest and the nests of his friends while balking at fulfillment of his promises to Washington with respect to the guardia.

This is highly important in case it is at all true; but stories of that sort emanating from a Latin-American country almost invariably are the products of the stimulated imaginations of those on the outside of the political feast looking in, and consequently ought to be received with a due amount of "reserve," until it is possible to check up on them.

In the present instance, it is as well to remember that the increase in banditry along the Nicaraguan east coast came suddenly, right after the disastrous earthquake at Managua, when the energies and attention of the government were necessarily diverted from police work. It was not a gradual growth.

At the same time it might be a wise and prudent thing for the government in Washington to send General McCoy to Nicaragua to find out just what really is going on, and if necessary admonish his friend, Moncada, to be more careful in watching his step. The United States has been at some trouble and expense in trying to help Nicaragua get on its feet politically, and it likewise has sacrificed some valuable lives in performing the job; so it has a right to interpose a word now and then, when a word is needful or will help.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Among prolific causes of traffic collisions, the police chief stresses driving through red lights and carelessness on amber signals. The first of these offenses he calls sheer carelessness, which it usually is, although sometimes it is deliberate recklessness. The latter offense is always premeditated—and frequently followed by serious consequences, as the records show.

Amber lights are intended primarily for moving traffic, a cautionary signal to prepare for a full stop by the time the red lights come on. Cars traveling at legal speed cannot always stop on the amber. Consequently moving traffic is entitled to the benefit of the doubt. This makes it all the more necessary for traffic already halted to wait for the green light before crossing. Amber lights to such traffic are merely a signal to "get set."

The change from red to amber to green has been so widely abused that in this and other congested cities the intermediate light has been to a considerable extent eliminated, with consequent inconvenience to careful drivers. Continued abuse of it would warrant the adjustment of all lights so that they changed directly from red to green. Again the considerate driver has to suffer for the selfish impetuosity of a few fast boys who can't hold their horses until they have the right of way.

HOOVER'S GUEST

The recognition extended by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover to the 13-year-old hero of the Colorado blizzard, who gave his own clothing in a vain attempt to keep his schoolmates from freezing to death in a stalled bus, will be heartily applauded by the nation. The first citizens of the land have merely done what the nation would have had them do.

Americans are notorious for their individualism, which sometimes wears the aspect of selfishness; but there is not a people under the sun quicker to individual self-sacrifice than they. The story of Brian Untiedt's attempt to save other lives by risking his own has touched the heart and imagination of the American people. The remarkable thing about it is not that his heart responded to the need of his playmates; but rather that his brain—which was another way of spelling Brian—functioned, at 13 years of age, as intelligently as it did.

Other boys might have conducted themselves equally commendably. That's the old story. Some other German might have brought up the reinforcements that turned the tide at Waterloo. The opportunity there was Bluecher's—and here was Brian Untiedt. They both seized it. The Umlight into which this average American boy has been projected by an act of heroism will not shine in vain. Other 13-year-olds will be inspired by it to deeds of equal merit.

WOMEN OCEAN FLIERS

Two young women now cherish ambitions to be the first solo woman flier across the Atlantic ocean. Miss Ruth Nichols of Rye, New York, and Miss Edith McColl of Galt, Ontario, are these two daring girls. The Atlantic ocean is a terror haunted desert of storms, offering no refuge to the daring aviator. It is a breeding place of fogs and icy sheet, in which new perils appear any moment without warning.

The country feels the warmest admiration for anyone, particularly for a young woman, who has the nerve and scientific training to attempt such a crossing. If it was asked for counsel, it would say to wait a little, until some of the problems that make such a flight dangerous have been solved.

The latest news regarding the Italo-French naval arrangement indicates the approach of an agreement to disagree, leaving each to do as it pleases. That at least ought to relieve the friction.

While the king of Siam is learning things, he may be able to teach this country one or two valuable things, for he seems to be a rather enlightened and progressive gentleman.

Los Angeles says its earthquake lasted only five seconds, or fifteen seconds less than the one on the Atlantic coast. But they have 'em ever so often in L. A. we hear.

The elimination of the organized racket would be as valuable a single movement toward prosperity as could be carried through.

Every once in a while when somebody talks of a third party, we think of dear old Catiline and the one he tried to form.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—Uncle Henry Ford says that a repeal of the Dry Law would cut wages.

And a lot of people think that it's better to have the wages cut than the likker.

STRANGE INTERLUDE

A man from Pennsylvania recently departed for home from a midtown hotel, leaving on the bureau the picture of a very beautiful young woman in a tooled blue-leather frame. A maid took the picture to the lost and found department and the man was communicated with.

"Smash that picture—burn it—give it to the Salvation Army—do anything you want with it," he wired to the hotel, "but for heaven's sake don't send it back here."

ONE LITTLE WORD

Says Jed Harris, the theatrical producer:

"There is hardly any theatrical public left for cheap and offensive dramatic fare. The movies and the sound films have absorbed all the available trash of that sort and probably will continue to do so, so that what little dirt finds its way to the legitimate stage is easy to recognize."

And he continues: "The stage is like a good-natured trollop. She may smile on a man one minute and be off the next. She may make his fortune and then leave him flat. She's an amiable wench—so amiable that she survives in the public affection despite all the attacks on puritans and reformers and is LIABLE to continue to be held in favor for a long time yet. I, at least, am fond of her."

Mr. Harris' use of the word "liable" when he meant "likely" is significant.

INTERNAL TROUBLE

Mr. Harris is right. The theatre survives despite puritans and reformers—despite a menace more deadly than either puritan or reformer, namely, the present breed that has the stage in its grip.

The stage, like the church, has suffered more from within than from without—from its friends rather than from its enemies.

FRUXAMPLE

Take Jed Harris for example: Just a lucky kid—that's the best you can say for him. Touted out of all proportion to his merit. A nice lad taken by and large, but a man whose reputation and whose ability wouldn't recognize each other if they met head on outside his office in the glare of the midday sun.

He runs around Broadway in odd raiment, needing a shave and a haircut. These things have been noted by the army of peepers who scribble for the press and the unthinking have come to invest Jed Harris with the attributes of genius—not because of any outstanding accomplishment in his chosen profession, but because of these little eccentricities of personality.

An ironic fate completed the ludicrous picture by showering Jed Harris with wealth in his youth; and what is it the jester says in "As You Like It?"

"Nay, call me not 'fool' till heaven hath sent me fortune."

THE NATIONAL MAY POLE DANCE

LAND HOLDING SYSTEM OF SPANISH REPUBLIC PLAYED DOWN IN NEWS

CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The Spanish republicans' start upon reconstruction of their country's land holding system has been curiously "played down" in cables from Europe thus far.

It has been mentioned, but only casually.

Perhaps this is because, agriculturally, Spain has been particularly hard hit by post-war deflation, with a resultant slump in the price of farms, shallow economists temporarily have ceased to consider land of much importance.

It would be strange if Spanish intellectuals had fallen into such an error, for while the overthrow of monarchy's actual practice was thoroughly unenlightened, the abstract reasoning of the advanced, independent school of Spain's economic thought has long been of a very high order.

However, key men in the new government appear to be living up to what might have been expected of them.

The initial impression appears to have been that an ultra-conservative group of republicans had come into power, in Madrid. It was hard to believe of a cabinet which included the veteran liberal, Alejandro Lerroux, in the premier post of minister of state, and the famous socialist agrarian authority, Fernando de los Rios, in charge of the portfolio of justice, but that was the verdict.

Quite likely Moscow's expressed dissatisfaction had something to do with it; even Dr. de los Rios evidently is not radical enough for the Kremlin.

The Russian newspaper Izvestia, for example, was first to broadcast the complaint that the Zamora regime showed no signs of moving in the direction of dispossessing the great landlords, whose generally-recognized greed, since the creation of their estates began about the middle of the Nineteenth century, notoriously has reduced a fairly prosperous peasantry to dire poverty in the last 80 years.

Yet the very batch of dispatches among which a translation of this accusation by Izvestia was one, contained also an interview from Minister of Justice de los Rios describing steps already taken by him toward establishing a "co-operative" system of peasant proprietorship immediately.

It is not, to be sure, on the Russian model, which it may be accounts for Izvestia's disapproval. There is nothing in it to evoke the applause of orthodox standpaters in countries like the United States, nevertheless.

Dr. de los Rios will be denounced as an out-and-out "red," and, just as soon as it is generally noticed that he employs the paradoxical expression, "communally-owned land."

It is not so crimson an idea, for all that. Not if antiquity confers respectability.

Land was held largely in common throughout Europe until comparatively recently—in England and until the mid-1700's, when the "squires" began concentrating it in big estates, each with its tenant, just as with the disappearance of free land, a tenant class is being created in this country now.

Spain, to a great extent, clung to common ownership for a century longer than the English. The system is not entirely extinct in the province of Leon today.

But in Spain the grandees tried to effect their grab more quickly than the English aristocracy had done, and it precipitated a revolution.

Its principal purpose was to restore their land to the people, as I have been assured by as competent a historical authority as Francisco Salmeron, a son of Nicolas Salmeron, who was one of the three presidents of the short-lived Spanish republic of 1873.

Monarchist rule speedily was re-established. It is true. The grandees got the land after all. They held it for more than five and a half decades, but in 1931 the Zamora provisional administration has taken up the task of returning it to the peasantry exactly where President Salmeron had to drop it just after Ulysses S.

Grant's second inauguration in Washington.

As Dr. de los Rios outlines his plan, the program is to make of each of the Spanish municipalities a kind of "holding company" for the farming area in its vicinity, with the peasants as members of the company.

At present he is drafting leases vesting the land titles in the municipalities.

The expropriated grandee landlords, he says, are to be compensated "at a fair rate, to be fixed by the government," not by the grandees, lest it prove impossible ever to agree on a "fair rate."

Will it be an application of the Henry Georgian single tax principle?

I put this question to Congressman Robert Crosser of Cleveland, who, I believe, understands the single tax more fully than any other man in Washington, and he rather disappointed me (for I would like to see the single tax tried out on so large a scale) by saying he thinks not.

"Of course it depends," he said, "upon the terms on which the farmer gets his land."

"If he is given full possession of it, and pays, each year, full value for that year's use of it, and, on that basis, is recognized as entitled to all of whatever it yields to him, then it's a single tax transaction; but if the farmers farm co-operatively and divide their total product among themselves, that's socialism. It looks to me like socialism."

Besides, there seems to be no mention of industrial land, which should be included, as well as agricultural land, if this is the single tax."

On one point, however, the congressional agreement with me—regardless of the "fair rate" of their compensation, the expropriated grandees can be depended on to make Spain's hills echo to the lamentations at the fashion in which they are certain to swear they have been gypped.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Graham Cracker Pie.—Sixteen graham crackers, rolled fine; one half cup granulated sugar, one teaspoon cinnamon, Mix as for pie crust; pack one-half of mixture in pie pan. Reserve the other half to be crumbled over the top of pie. Any of the following fillings may be used:

Cook until this mixture coats a spoon, adding flavoring after removing from stove. Pour into pie crust. Make a meringue of the egg whites and three tablespoons granulated sugar. Spread this over custard and top with the remaining half of cracker mixture. Bake until brown.

Apple Sauce Filling.—Make a sweet apple sauce, free from too much moisture. Mix half a cup of milk and one egg into the apple sauce. Pour into the cracker crust and then top it with the other half of cracker mixture. Bake until brown.

Pineapple Filling.—Use a can of crushed pineapple. Sweeten to taste. Beat in two eggs and a little milk. Pour into crust. Proceed as above. Whipped cream may be used to top the dessert just before serving.

Infant May Be Fed Artificially

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The science of artificial feeding of infants has made such rapid progress in the past two decades that it can confidently be asserted that any baby can be raised now on the bottle. It is not so easy on the baby as mother's milk, and there has not yet appeared any baby specialist who says he can prepare a better mixture for a human baby than mother's milk. But a careful statistical comparison of bottle-fed and milk-fed babies shows the bottle feeders to be in very satisfactory condition.

Provided the bottle feeding is conducted under good and hygienic surroundings, say the doctors who have conducted the test. The conditions favorable to artificial feeding are: (1) an equable climate conducive to the keeping of milk unspiced without even ice or mechanical refrigeration, and without the depressing effects of heat and cold; (2) reliable, pure milk; (3) frequent medical supervision of feeding and care; (4) and the routine administration at the proper ages of necessary dietary accessories, such as cod liver oil, orange juice and green vegetables. In addition there is always demanded fresh air and sun baths, and a large proportion of the babies studied had plenty of sun baths.

Such conditions can be duplicated in most American communities. The climate factor is the only one which might cause any question.

The results of the study show that mother's milk is the ideal food for the baby for the first three months. In some cases it continues to be for some months more. But these were not the majority of the cases. This is a surprising statement, considering that we have always supposed that breast feeding should continue for six months or more, and was always certainly best for that period.

When suitable conditions for good bottle feeding are present, however, the observers state (and that feature of suitable conditions is to be emphasized) and when the baby is failing to show good and rapid progress, there need not be the slightest hesitancy after the third month in advising weaning.

So far as weight alone is concerned, the breast-fed babies showed a better mean gain during the first three months of their life. The bottle-fed babies gained as much weight than the breast-fed after the first three months, and this superiority was greater and greater for each succeeding month.

The question of infection was also studied—the number of colds, etc., the babies had. These figures were not significant so far as I can see. The breast-fed babies had more infections in the first, third and fourth quarter-year periods. The bottle-fed babies had more infections in the second three-month period.

In the usual story of some Utopia of the future, a visitor is shown great nurseries of babies, all being artificially fed and reared in a standardized, scientific, mechanical way. Children specialists, the flower of the medical profession today, are naturally conservative. They do not encourage such news. But evidently they are on the verge of making it happen.

Stealing Girl Friend From Pal

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Virginia Lee: I am very much in love with a young woman of my own age and it seems to me my affection is returned."

"She has been going steady for the last three years with a friend of mine, but they have broken up five or six times in the last four months. During one of their spats I had a few dates with her."

"My friend's attitude toward me has changed decidedly during my brief acquaintance with this young lady. His pride is hurt and he has again resumed his attentions toward her to the extent of asking her to go steady again. Her disposition is so such that she can't bear to hurt anyone. She has sacrificed herself rather than hurt his feelings and has consented to go steady."

"She does not want to toss our friendship aside and regrets that she has promised to go steady with my friend."

"In a position of this kind, what would you advise me to do? Consider friendship or my desire and love for her? Puzzled and Blue."

Why not put the matter frankly up to your friend? Tell him that you love the girl and think she likes you, and you would like to court her if his heart is not too set on her. If he tells you he loves her sincerely and wants to marry her, you can only respect his feelings; and, as he has first claim on her, let her settle the matter.

If she is sincere in her liking for you she will hardly carry the other matter so far that she will marry your friend to save hurting his feelings, thus making three people feel badly.

You can hardly expect your friend to feel cordial toward you under the circumstances, can you? Taking away another fellow's girl friend is just not done among good pals.

A Heavy Heart: Send me your name and address and I can help you. And stop worrying. You will get strong if you stop making yourself ill by worry.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a boy 19. Have been going with a girl 18 for the last two years."

"Virginia, I really love this girl and she says she loves me, but somehow I doubt her just a little. About a year ago she told me an untruth. I caught her in it and she admitted it and promised me she would never lie to me again. So far as I know she has kept this promise."

"She has another date once every month or six weeks, but tells me about them and asks me if I care. I tell her if she wants them I do not care, but really I do a whole lot. Virginia, she never argues or fusses about anything. She always agrees with me, but when I am angry she will play the piano or sing for awhile and then ask me whether I am still mad, and if I say yes, she continues to play."

"Virginia, what I want to know is how to make myself believe her and have confidence in her. A Friend."

"I think your girl friend's a cute kid, to play the piano and sing and ask you if you've gotten over your mad and if you haven't to keep on playing. I bet you do, too. Don't you, Scott?"

As to the other thing, your lack of confidence in her, I think you are silly. She only told one lie and never has told you another for a year. Have you never told a lie? I bet you have, and you'd be surprised and pained if she doubted you for any length of time. Why you told me you told a lie—several of them, in fact, when you said you told her you didn't care if she had another date and you really did. What do you call that?

No one is perfect, you know. Be glad that you've got such a sweet girl friend, and enjoy her company. Also trust her as you expect her to trust you.

Fat Yields To Faithful Exercising

By GLADYS GLAD

"Dear Miss Glad: Since I've been following the reducing instructions contained in your booklet on 'The New Figure,' I've managed to lose the 24 excess pounds that were giving my figure such 'not-so-girlish' lines. However, my abdomen is still a bit too well padded. I feel that a few extra exercises, to supplement the excellent ones listed in your booklet, would help to hasten the reduction of this part of my body. Can you prescribe any exercises. 'Ada Lou.'"

The following exercises practiced vigorously every day, will help to break up the fatty tissues that have accumulated on your abdomen: Stand erect, legs apart, palms together overhead. Bending at the waist, swing the hands down between the legs.

Stand erect, feet together, arms raised overhead. Bend back as far as you can, and then bend forward, touching the floor with the tips of your fingers. Keep your knees stiff during this exercise.

Lie on your back on the floor, arms extended overhead. Bending at the waist, and keeping the knees stiff, rise forward and touch your toes with the tips of your fingers.

"Dear Miss Glad: I am afflicted with an unpleasant breath, and as a result, always feel ill at ease and self-conscious. This disagreeable condition is slowly but surely giving me an inferiority complex, and I'd like to correct it. What would you advise? 'Troubled.'"

Unpleasant breath generally results from constipation, digestive disorders or uncleaned teeth. You must first determine the exact cause of the condition, and then correct it. If you are afflicted with an unhealthy stomach condition, or with constipation, you must modify your diet with attention to better elimination. If these conditions do not exist, you must give particular attention to the cleansing of your teeth. Brush your teeth frequently, and always after eating. And use a mouth wash after each brushing. An excellent mouth wash can be made by the addition of one-fourth of a teaspoon of borax, one-fourth of a teaspoon of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoon of peroxide to a glass of warm water.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have extremely small eyes, and although I know that the aperture of the eye can be made larger by plastic surgery, I am unable, at present, to undergo such an operation. Is there anything that I can do to make my eyes appear larger? Hazel G."

You can make your eyes appear larger by the artistic use of make-up. Get an eye pencil, one with a very fine point, and draw a thin line under each eye, close to the lashes. Carry the line one-fourth of an inch beyond the outer corner of the eye, and blur it with the fingertip. The eyes can also be made to appear larger by the skillful use of eyeshadow cream. Put a little of the cream on your index finger tip, and blend it over the upper eyelids. It should be darker at the lashes, and should shade into almost no color at all. Mascara on the eyelashes makes the lashes, and therefore the whole eye, more attractive. Do not rouge your cheeks too heavily, as it will overshadow your eyes.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer lengthy questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her articles on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," 2 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

American League Opened With Tie Contest

KRIPPENDORF TIES WITH ST. BRIGID IN EIGHT INNING GAME

Scouts Knot Count In Final Stanza As Darkness Falls

On top of seven postponements on account of adverse weather, the St. Brigid and Krippendorf softball teams went to work and paved the way for another double-header by playing a tie game at Cox Field Thursday night.

The two American League teams, apparently about evenly matched, struggled for eight innings and when darkness came the score was deadlocked at 5 to 5.

St. Brigid scored four runs in the first inning on two errors, a home run by Pitcher Hornick, a base on balls, another error and an out at first, but Krippendorf, after being blanked for three rounds, leveled the count in the fourth on a walk, double by Green, singles by Anderson and Foley and an out at first.

In the seventh Krippendorf broke the deadlock by counting a run on an error and a timely hit by Green, but in the last half of the eighth a double by Joe Zenni and a single by Hornick evened the score.

Pitching and batting of Hornick, elongated St. Brigid hurler, was the high spot of the game. He drove in all of his team's runs and limited Krippendorf to seven hits, four of which were bunched in the fourth inning.

Luttrell, on the mound for Krippendorf, defending league champion, also held his opponents to seven scattered singles and would probably have won had it not been for the first inning miscues of his supporting cast.

On the whole the fielding was surprisingly good and both pitchers worked out of several ticklish situations.

The champion Lang Chevrolet Co. will start out in quest of a second straight National League title Friday night, clashing with the Wood's Barber Shop team.

POTATO MARKETING GROUP WILL BE FORMED IN MIAMI VALLEY

At a gathering of representative potato growers from Green, Montgomery, Miami, Champaign, Clark and Darke Counties in Dayton Thursday night, E. J. Ferguson, Dayton Pike, was selected chairman of a committee to form plans for a potato marketing organization in the Miami Valley. Mr. Ferguson is one of the largest growers in the Dayton area with annually more than fifty acres.

Each county group selected two growers on the committee, W. B. Ferguson of the Clinton Pike being the other Greene County representative. Other representatives attending from Greene County were W. S. Chilton, Leroy Jacobs, E. A. Drake, C. M. Williamson and R. O. Swindler.

Other members of the committee selected by the representative potato growers in the largest potato growing section are: Montgomery County, Arthur Jackson and E. L. Zehring; Miami County, Walter Schimmel and A. E. Studebaker; Clark County, Guy Studebaker and John Pense, Champaign County, A. M. Sturdevant and Frank Repert; Darke County, Virgil Royer and R. O. Weaver.

C. W. Houck, potato marketing specialist of Ohio State University, said that Ohio does not produce half the potatoes consumed in the state and that 12,000 to 15,000 cars are brought into the state annually. He said one chain of stores in Dayton shipped sixty carloads of potatoes into that city per month. There requirements were outlined for the grower by Mr. Houck: Set up a standard grade with government inspection; uniform package to identify the grower's product and pooling of potatoes by the grower in the Miami Valley to reduce competition in selling.

E. B. Tussing, potato specialist of the University, stressed the production of a quality product declaring buyers are becoming more exacting and desire uniform, well graded quality stock. He said all retail grocery stores desire and realize the importance of buying local produce because unless local producers sell their product they cannot buy, but that often local stock is inferior in quality.

News that Steve Swetonick's return to good health has not progressed rapidly has not helped matters, either.

Steve went on the shelf after the first spring workout and he has been a patient since. The club medic at the time figured Steve could start throwing and limbering up the old arm before the season began, but now the report is that Steve must rest another month.

The Buccaneers, meanwhile, have not been sleeping. They've tried to get almost every hurler on which waivers have been asked.

But the waivers have been without drawn. Ball clubs are getting cagey. You don't see any big league outfit rushing to the Bucs' aid, even for good coin, when all the Pirates need to get into that National League flag scrap is a little encouragement in the box.

The Cubs have plenty of good pitchers decorating the bench and Pittsburgh has been trying in vain to get one.

RUSH FOR VETERAN LOANS SUBSIDIES

The rush of World War veterans to borrow on their adjusted compensation certificates is virtually over, although loan applications are still being received at the average rate of 200 a day at the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, Cincinnati regional office, according to word received by Paul Fuller, commander of Foody Post, American Legion.

At the close of business April 28 the Cincinnati regional bureau, to which applications of Greene County veterans were forwarded, had received a total of 46,549 applications for loans, and had issued 38,031 checks, their total money value being $14,047,133.16.

Many duplications were noted and on April 28 there was pending a total of only 658 applications. Most of these had already been passed upon and were being held up because of some irregularity or unusual circumstance.

SPYING ON SPORTS

BY WILLIAM RITT

Central Press Sports Editor

Well, Eddie Roush, it's good to see you again in a Red box score. Roush, of course, it's like old times, Eddie, even if the figure in the base-hit column isn't as fat as it used to be.

It is still pretty cold these days and the old muscles probably don't snap to front and center as they did—well, never mind. Summer suns have a way of baking worn, tired sinews back into shape.

Anyway, you nicked Wally French for two, and he's no slouch. And that was a corker you smacked off Burleigh Grimes' specialty. Not a bad beginning and there's the brand new season stretching ahead.

And if any of those birds up in the seats start gyping, Eddie, give 'em the tin ear. You didn't have to come back if you didn't want to. You weren't the kind of bird who throws hard-earned gelt out of the window and it was a long time between "hello" and "goodbye" in the big leagues for Eddie Roush.

Sort of figure, Eddie, that one of the reasons you came back was because you thought it would be kind of nice to play for Cincinnati once more. Right?

That town has been strong for you, Eddie, and you for the town. You two did each other a lot of good back a decade or so ago. Must have been like meeting an old friend again when you slipped into a freshly-laundered Red uniform once more.

It's the same old town, Eddie. The same old Cincinnati. The old Ohio curled up in front and the blue hills standing guard to the rear. Eden Park, Fountain Square, Fairview Heights and those funny street cars that seem to go straight up—the same old Cincy.

But you're not in the same company, Eddie. The same town, but not the same company.

The Reds of today, Eddie, are all right. They are young and hustling and they have a cracking good manager in Dan Howley. He's a builder of good ball clubs, this Howley, and he's gathering good material. But the Reds this year do not figure to be hot.

They'll come along one of these days. You remember, Eddie, when you came to the Reds—when they weren't such a much. And then Pat Moran got busy. He knew his stuff, Pat did, and what a tough break he got.

Those were the days, weren't they, Eddie?

What a bunch! Jake Daubert, Morrie Rath, Heinie Groh and Larry Kopf in the infield. Pat Duncan, Greasy Neale and you in the outfield. Dutch Reuther, Slim Salie, Hod Eller, Jimmy Rigney, Ray Fisher and a youngster, Adolphe Louque, or the name they Wingo and old Bill Raden behind the bat.

You boys roared into Gotham one hot day in 1919, massacred one of John McGraw's best teams—and left with the flag in your pockets.

Where are they now, Eddie, where are the town's old champs? Look around. That isn't old Jake at first base. That's Mickey Heath, who's coming up and Daubert has passed on. That crouching figure behind the plate, masked by baseball armor, isn't old Bill Raden. That's Clyde Sukeforth, another comer.

It's that way everywhere you look. They have all gone on. Luque's with the Robins, some still hang on in the minors, others have become managers or scouts or have quit entirely. Neale's a football coach. Pat Moran is dead. You're all that's left of that great 1919 gang, Eddie. You're Cincinnati's lone remnant of the bright hued pennant that flapped so proudly above Redland field long ago.

You're up, Eddie. This guy hasn't got a thing, Eddie; not a thing. Watch for his cripplie, Eddie, and get it—right on the nose!

PLAN ANNUAL FIELD MEET ON JUNE 13

JAMES M. FLETCHER DIES; WAS RETIRED XENIA BUSINESS MAN

James M. Fletcher, 69, well known retired Xenia business man, died suddenly at his home, 207 W. Second St., Friday morning at 8 o'clock. He had been in failing health several months suffering from heart trouble and suffered a sudden heart attack shortly after arising Friday morning.

Mr. Fletcher was born in Greene County July 3, 1861, the son of Joseph and Margaret Fletcher and had spent his entire life in Xenia and vicinity. He was in the plumbing business here for many years being a member of the firm of Baldwin and Fletcher. After the partnership between Mr. Fletcher and Fred P. Baldwin was dissolved Mr. Fletcher continued to operate the firm under the same name. Later Mr. Fletcher was employed as a deputy oil inspector for the state under Gov. James M. Cox, but had been retired from active business about ten years. Mr. Fletcher was an active Democrat and had served as chairman of the Democratic executive committee of Greene County and as Democratic member and chief of the board of elections for many years.

Mr. Fletcher was a member of St. Bridget Church and of Xenia Council, Knights of Columbus. His marriage to Miss Margaret Daly, this city, took place forty-three years ago and she survives with the following children: Miss Edna Fletcher, at home; Miss Nellie Fletcher, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Mrs. William Osterle, Connelville, Pa.; James Fletcher, Cincinnati and Luke J. Fletcher, this city. A brother, William E. Fletcher, proprietor of the "Smoke House," this city, also survives.

Funeral arrangements have not been made and will be announced later.

INVADERS NEW FIELD

DISTINCTION of being probably the first woman ever appointed a real estate appraiser in Greene County is enjoyed by Mrs. Nellie Soward, Bellbrook, a telephone operator in the Bellbrook exchange.

Mrs. Soward was named in Common Pleas Court to serve with two men as a regularly appointed appraiser of realty involved in a partition suit, the case of James R. Davis and others against Allen H. Davis and others. The other appraisers appointed by the court are John Wright and Wilbur Berryhill.

FALSE ARREST MADE BASIS FOR $10,000 DAMAGE SUIT HERE

Suit demanding $10,000 damages has been filed in Common Pleas Court against Dr. C. Kenneth Schloss, said to be an Osborn dentist, by Leon J. Roth, Xenia, formerly of Clark County, who alleges the defendant had him arrested and imprisoned on a false charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Roth asserts the dentist caused his arrest September 20, 1930, on a charge of defrauding him of $6, that he was held in the Springfield jail for one day and later was held to the Greene County grand jury by Theodore F. Longnecker, Bath Twp., justice of the peace.

Complaining that he was incarcerated in the Greene County jail for four days and that he was forced to furnish $500 bond, Roth sets forth his case was ignored by the grand jury last February 11. The plaintiff claims he was required to pay $100 to procure bail bonds and $100 for attorney fees and that his reputation has been damaged. Attorney F. W. Dunkle, Xenia, represents the plaintiff.

SALVATION ARMY HEAD OPTIMISTIC

NEW YORK, May 1.—"I feel that we are turning the corner. These times are a direct result of the war. It was bound to happen, because you can't have such a waste without having to pay for it."

That was the statement today of General Edward J. Higgins, Salvation Army leader, who is in America from England for the first official visit in twenty-six years. He said he would not like to see England without the debt, although admitting it was abused in some instances.

PERSONS accustomed to driving other cars marvel at the quickness and litheness with which even the largest Nash steps through and around traffic. The answer is the notable Nash freedom from excess weight. Nash eliminates weight at precisely those points where excess weight interferes most with performance. Nash hollows out its crankpins, thus reducing the centrifugal load on the crankshaft bearings by more than three tons when the shaft is revolving at top speed. Nash Invar Strut pistons are a whole pound lighter than cast iron pistons—resulting in livelier, more spirited performance. TRIP ALONG "DOVER ROAD" IS PLEASANT GUILD EXCURSION

The Xenia Little Theater Guild, presenting the third offering of its current season, took members of this entirely worth while dramatic group on a tremendously satisfying trip over the "Dover Road" Thursday night at the Opera House.

Despite its rather commonplace and slightly vague title, the "Dover Road," it developed, was a highly dangerous highway for those who traversed it; a rocky road paved with good intentions but full of pitfalls for unwary travelers.

Personally, we thoroughly enjoyed the conducted tour along this thoroughfare and if we became a trifle fatigued before the end of the journey, blame it upon those springless seats in the Guild's sight-seeing bus—namely, those hard-bottom Opera House chairs. Other than to confess a mild reluctance to sitting for any great length of time on an Opera House seat, no matter what the inducement (this can't be helped by the Guild)—we must admit the evening was well spent.

The Guild has reached a point where much is expected of each succeeding play and fine discrimination was shown in the selection of the latest vehicle.

Not only was the "Dover Road," by A. A. Milne, a happy choice but the small cast (there being only five important roles) was chosen with admirable foresight—an achievement in itself. The author gave his unique theme (flippant treatment and slapped a glow into the dialogue which only on rare occasions faded to a pastel pink. The comedy concerns itself (before we forget it) with two runaway couples bent upon marriage who have their wedding plans interrupted by a mysterious Mr. Latimer, a strange personage, who devotes his time to preventing unhappy matrimonial ventures.

This Mr. Latimer appears to have an advance lowdown on the plans of romantically inclined couples for elopements to France by way of the road to Dover and thence across the English channel. He has the elopers diverted to his house, a little way off the Dover Road, where he forces them to remain as his guests for a week on probation, thus endeavoring to reverse the old saying by giving them a chance to repent at leisure before marrying in haste.

It seems that Mr. Latimer strives especially to circumvent second marriages when he has knowledge of one or both of the principals has made a fiasco out of his first marital experiment.

In the case at hand "Leonard," a lawyer, tiring of an "impossible" wife, has eloped with a young girl, "Anne," who makes herself believe she is modern enough not to mind the existence of the wife, who is expected to get a divorce anyway. By an odd "coincidence," Mr. Latimer so arranges that the "neglected" wife, "Eustasia," and "Nicholas," a young Oxford graduate with whom she had eloped a week earlier, are also brought to his home and forced to stay for a probationary period at about the same time.

Mr. Latimer takes devious methods to make both couples realize they have been too hasty and to make the young girl on the one hand and the young man on the other, wish they had thought twice before rashly agreeing to run away with individuals whose previous matrimonial ship had foundered.

Suffice to say that neither couple gets married after all and by way of being original, the author, disclosing a little delicate bitterness on the subject of marriage, has the two men take "French leave" of the household and leave the ladies in the lurch.

Miss Helen Little as "Anne," Mrs. Helen Adair as "Eustasia," Francis Orr as "Mr. Latimer," Attorney George Smith as "Leonard," and Wardsworth Clarke as "Nicholas," composed the cast, all of them making their Guild debuts.

Truth to tell we entertained a secret misgiving that Miss Little might not make herself heard distinctly. But our fears were groundless for she was not only charming and perfectly at ease but her voice was always at the correct pitch.

Mrs. Adair had a difficult role—the character of an aggravating type of woman, the "ministering angel" kind, and she gave it a fine portrayal. Attorney Smith's acting also gave us a pleasant surprise, so nonchalant and perfectly natural was he at all times, while the selection of Francis Orr for the part of "Latimer" was certainly a happy thought. He revealed himself to be quite talented along dramatic lines. Wardsworth Clarke, another newcomer to Guild circles, may also be commended highly even to his Oxford accent.

William Anderson, as "Dominic," the perfect butler, also had a speaking role, although a minor one and filled it capably. The Misses Eileen Sayre and Katherine Chew and Andrew Frazer and Robert Kinsey had non-speaking parts as members of the staff of "Latimer's" household.

Miss Eleanor Kiernan, directress of the Guild plays, apparently has a passion for perfection. If Miss Kiernan selected the latest cast, and we can only suppose she did, then she scored another triumph. The fact that members of the cast had so many lines and still remembered them so well was also rather remarkable.

A word about the stage scenery and costumes. The setting was magnificent, and the costumes beautiful. "Hy" Hyman was the stage manager. Mrs. Henry L. Farrell, chairman of the scenery committee. Miss Letitia Dillen-court chairman of the costumes committee and Miss Allegra Hawes chairman of the properties committee.

Lastly, your correspondent had only one protest to make. There was a total absence of music. What became of Xenia's civic orchestra? Something ought to have been done about that. We missed the orchestra. Without it no Guild play is quite complete.

OVERCROWDING WORSE THAN EVER AT OHIO PEN

By BONITA WITT
Central Press Staff Writer
COLUMBUS, O., May 1.—April 21, first anniversary of the Columbus penitentiary fire, in which 320 convicts lost their lives, writhing in agony in their locked cells as the flames consumed them, found appalling conditions still existing.

The gray forbidding walls still house 100 per cent more convicts than they were designed to incarcerate, tales of mismanagement still persist and mutterings against the regime of Warden Preston E. Thomas continue to find their way outside the walls.

Ohio's general appropriation bill has not yet been submitted to the legislature and no material relief either at Columbus or other state institutions is available until such time as a financial program is worked out and passed upon by the legislature.

A welfare budget, however, was presented to the legislature by Governor George White. It calls for approximately $10,000,000 for the biennium 1931-32. Governor White has requested that a means of financing the program be worked out of current revenues. In the event, however, that this cannot be done, he recommends a bond issue be submitted to the electorate. A 10-year program involving an expenditure of approximately thirty-four millions also has been recommended.

A Beginning Made
Just before the legislature recessed until May 11, three bills were passed which are looked upon as the beginning of a new era in Ohio's penal history. One provides for the repeal of the Norwood law which permitted judges to set longer minimum sentences than those provided by law to cover the offense; the second permits time to be lopped off sentences for good behavior, and the third increases the parole board from two to four members.

To the writer the governor declared: "There are many men in the penitentiary who should have been paroled years ago. They have learned their lesson and are ready to become useful citizens again. To keep them imprisoned year after year tends to make them bitter. Take, for instance, Clinton Grate, who has confessed to firing the prison last Easter Monday. He is serving the eleventh year of a 20-25 year sentence for robbing a gasoline station of less than $25. If he had been given a lighter sentence he might have returned to society in a few years a better man and the prison catastrophe might have been averted."

"It is interesting," continued the governor, "to find that Grate started the fire because he did not want to build cells to imprison other men. I am not in favor of coddling prisoners, but many men in Columbus never should have been put into that kind of a prison."

Warden Preston E. Thomas is jubilant over the passage of the three bills. In discussing the anniversary of the fire Warden Thomas says: "Conditions today are no better than they were a year ago. The new cell block, which houses 816 men, is inadequate to relieve conditions since there are more men at Columbus now than a year ago—when it was already overcrowded. I have approximately 4800 prisoners now and the institution was built to care for 2,400.

"The men are sleeping in the shop building, the hospital and in the yard in the summer. The new industrial building, which is three stories high, covering 111,000 square feet of floor space, will afford work for many men who must now sit idle, but that does not help housing conditions."

Prisoners Punished for Year

Privileges have been restored to the 250 convicts classed as agitators after the fire only in recent weeks. Now they are permitted to attend the weekly talkie show. Radios still are barred, and little opportunity for exercise is given.

The "bad boys" of old K company, now Company L, spend all their entire time in their tiny cells.

A memorial fountain is the only reminder of the fire.

G and H cell block, in which the fire occurred, has been repaired. A new roof covers it and new steel work on the upper tiers replaces the bars which the fire reduced to molten lumps.

The new I and K block, one of the most modern in the country, has been completed and considerable progress has been made in fireproofing old buildings.

The lawn in the yard has been graded and grass seed sown. Horticulturally inclined inmates are building a rock garden in an effort to brighten the prison grayness.

Physically the "O. P." as it is called, is more attractive (if that word may be used) than it was a year ago, what with rock garden, fountain and model cell block. No news of trouble with the men who made the prison ring with their cat calls for days after the fire reaches the outside. "Pipe lines" from within the walls, however, give a hint of the discontent which still seethes.

Immediately after the fire prisoners sent out word that the warden would be killed if he stepped within the walls, and many of the convicts still hold him responsible for the death of their 320 fellow inmates, who lost their lives because no order was given to release them.

Governor White is reluctant to discuss the probability of an eventual investigation of the prison management.

Easter Monday may not have been in vain, however, since a hopeful outlook for the future is expressed by Welfare Director John McSweeney, interviewed at his office. "There never was a time," he says, "when the legislature was more responsive to welfare legislation. We must lay the burden on the legislature for the money then we accept the burden of spending it in the most judicious manner possible."

"The penitentiary will be maintained where it is, in a manufacturing section of Columbus, where it can be used for that type of prisoner who should be maintained in such an institution."

"Other institutions should provide sunshine and open air. London prison farm should be enlarged. Others of the London type should be constructed. This would permit more complete classification of prisoners."

"We had the thought that an island in Lake Erie would give a healthful location, providing security without the confining influence of a wall."

"These are merely some of the hopes we have for the care of the wards of the state committed to our care."

The Flower Parade

(This is the first of a series of garden articles.)

By DR. KARL F. KELLERMAN
Bureau of Plant Industry
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Summer-long parade of color and variety develops from plantings of annuals if they are handled properly and according to the practices recommended by the horticulturists of the bureau of plant industry. They are the transients of the flower beds, but they well repay for the starting they require each year in the beauty they yield for the gardener.

At times in summer when the permanent plantings—shrubby and hardy perennials—are out of bloom, the annuals can be depended upon to fill an otherwise colorless bed or border. Annuals are easy to cultivate and lend themselves readily to decorative arrangement. They are especially valuable where quick, temporary effects are desired.

In places where permanent plantings have not been made, or have been made so recently that the foliage is thin and ragged, some of the taller-growing annuals can be used with fine effect to fill the gaps.

Castor-bean or ricinus, sunflowers of various kinds, even sorghums and other corn-like annuals, some of which grow as high as six feet, make excellent substitutes in such places. Massed against buildings, fences, or in front of other unattractive objects, these tall annuals serve as a colorful screen.

The moderate-growing, broad-leaved plants, such as the dwarf castor-bean, are suited for the bays of walks or driveways. The lower-growing varieties lend themselves for massing against the taller-growing annuals or shrubs.

Annuals vary widely in hardness. Some can be sown in the open ground in the fall or, as in the case of poppies, in the very early spring even before freezing weather is past. Others are so tender that they must be kept at temperatures well above frost at all times. The tender varieties, if planted in the open, must be started late, or if planted early, they must be kept under glass until all danger of frost is over.

Half-hardy annuals may be sown early. But their planting must be timed so that they will not come up before the heavy frosts are past. Once above ground they will stand only light frosts.

Some annuals must be sown where they are to bloom. Others thrive better when transplanted one or more times.

Annuals may be supplied to provide a constant supply of cut flowers for the home at times during the summer when the perennials are not in bloom.

Tomorrow: Pruning Roses.

By R. J. SCOTT

CHICAGO, TAKE NOTICE!

Valparaiso, Ind., Crimeless, Would Show Big Neighbor How To Clean Up

OFFICERS in autos patrol the streets and alleys at night.

RESIDENTS of Valparaiso have great faith in their mayor and chief of police.

By BONITA WITT
Central Press Staff Writer
VALPARAISO, Ind., May 1.—Yes! Believe it or not, here's a town, just forty miles from Chicago, that doesn't have a crime problem!

Many of the little towns on the outskirts of Chicago are overriden with the bad boys temporarily in the poor grades of Windy City police. No so with Valparaiso.

Local county court doesn't average three criminal cases a month except when suits come here through change in venue from the neighboring counties, where life is more hectic and gun-play more frequent.

No News in Robberies
There hasn't been a robbery big enough to rate even "a line" in the Valparaiso newspaper since last autumn.

How do the good folk keep their environs so crime free although they are almost within the shadow of Chicago's skyscrapers?

"That's easy," explains Robert Felton, elderly police chief. "The hoodlums aren't wanted here and they know it. Whenever we spot them on the street we order them out of town and they go."

"You see, we also have a night patrol. Several policemen ride the streets at night, in automobiles, looking for suspicious persons. When they see a stranger, they lock him up, if he can't give a satisfactory account of himself. We also stop strange automobiles and have a look at their occupants."

No Underworld
"Our problem is fairly simple because we really want to keep our town free of crime. We don't have an underworld as a result of official tolerance."

This may be a bit for Chicago. Valparaiso's streets aren't brightly lighted and the alleys are spooky places after dark, but that doesn't deter the eight members of the police force.

"I believe this patrolling of alleys is largely responsible for our ability to cope with crime despite our nearness to a large city," Mayor Harry Schenck says. "The police pick up the vagrants after ten o'clock and lock them in our jail, which is just an old fashioned hoghouse. In the morning we give them a breakfast and send them on their way. If they return too soon we give them harsher treatment."

Civic Pride Ardent
If the mayor and police chief are reluctant to give advice to Chicago, the residents of Valparaiso are not. "What we are doing in a small way Chicago could do in a big way," one explains. "If Chicago really wanted to get rid of its gangsters and hoodlums, it could do so easily. It would not take long for Mayor Schenck and Chief Felton to turn the trick if they had free rein there." There's only one cloud on Valparaiso's horizon—fear that its reputation for goodness will spread abroad and hoodlums will flock there to cultivate an air of respectability.

A Wise Rule

Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee.
—Psalm 55:22.

SOME men are forever counting over the past, grieving because they might have managed better. Others are anxiously planning for the future, only to find that their plans do not work out. This is because they have not learned the secret which was taught by a holy man, famous for his wisdom in guiding souls:

"Leave the past to the mercy of God.

"Seek in the present the will of God.

"Leave the future to the providence of God."

Only the present is mine. If I do God's will here and now, both past and future will take care of themselves.

Parents

Parents who rarely, or never, go to Church will find their children demanding that they have, also, the privilege to idle Sunday morning.

Since it is obviously bad to indulge in idleness, and worse to waste in such manner the moments that should be spent in Church, sensible parents will take their children to Sunday School.

Visitors

An incident that never fails to amuse is that of someone looking for his spectacles while they are caught on top of his head.

Many people, in a similar fashion, fail to realize that the Church is always at hand, and go through life spiritually blinded.

The Theater

While music no longer is openly employed to work upon the emotions in screen dramas, it is creeping back in the form of underscoring.

Correctly used, this music is heard by audiences only through their subconscious minds. It gives pulse and character to the drama and goes on simultaneously with the dialogue.

Dr. William Axt, former musical director of the Capitol Theater in New York and Oscar Radin are developing this new art at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Music in underscoring", explains Dr. Axt, "has to be unobtrusive—just something to color the dialogue. If an audience has to listen for it, we have failed. On the other hand, if it distracts their attention from the dialogue, also we have failed."

Great care has to be used in the choice of instruments. Wood winds, says Dr. Axt, blot dialogue. The music of one flute, for instance, would be fatal. Muted string sections over brasses are the best form of instrumentation for the new type of underscoring.

Ramon Novarro's new picture, "Daybreak," has a dozen motifs ranging from Brahms to folk songs. "The Secret Six," a gang picture, has music from several Wagnerian operas in its underlying score. In the future, Dr. Axt predicts, pictures may be underscoring almost their entirety.

Not so long ago Fox released Dorothy Jordan because they didn't think she was worth $75 a week. Now they are borrowing her from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for many times that amount to play the lead in a talkie version of Maude Pul-ton's old melodrama, "The Brat." Dorothy also made "Young Sinners" for Fox. She has been in great de-mand since her fine performance as the waif in "Min and Bill." Frank-lie Albertson plays the juvenile lead in "The Brat," and James Kirk-wood, who has recently returned to the screen, will have an im-portant part.

One of Hollywood's dog actors has an auto registered in his name. He is "Cameo," a grizzled fox-terrier which played in the first version of "Penrod and Sam" nine years ago, and which has been selected to re-create the role in the new First National talkie of this Booth Tarkington story. Ben Alexander, now a juvenile, was Penrod in the old film and Leon Janney will take the part in the new one. Director William Beau-dine remembered "Cameo" from the silent picture and got him for the talkie. The dog is owned by Hap Ward and the family auto is reg-istered to Cameo Ward.

What a shock! The noise of heavy timbers buckling is reproduced for the talkies by cracking peanut shells.
